flee, Pret-ty In-dian maid, of a cop-per shade, plain, When he said good-bye, tears were in her eyes, Beau-ty of the tribe, Bucks had tried to win,
And she clung to him. When the war is o'er,
She would not give in, Sent them all a-way, Red Rock then drew nigh, I'll be back once more, Take you for my queen. Red Rock then a-way, Love-light in his eye, On his knees he pray'd, Till he won his Fought for man-y day, Com-rades all were dead, Till at last he maid, Still he was a-fraid, That when on a raid, fled, To his sweet-heart sped, Said, 'At last I'm here,

He would lose this maid, That he loved so well,
Do you love me dear, As the day I left?"
When this he said, She shook her head, And this she said to him,
As this he said, She raised her head, smil-ing she said to him, Chorus
"Red Rock I love but you, Red Rock, my heart is true, Beats for none else but you, — Why do you doubt me love? When by the stars a-bove, I vow that noth-ing will, Ev-er keep my love still, Red Rock, when we're a-part,

It near-ly breaks my heart, Un-till I hear your knock, — Then de-parts sadness, En-ter the glad-ness, For you my own Red Rock." Rock.
